RETIRED FROM P. & R. RAILROAD AFTER 42 YEARS

T. F. Wright, of Aspers, Leaves as Bendersville Station Agent.

ROY R. STARNER TO TAKE POST

Forty-two years' service with the Reading company, beginning as a timekeeper on a construction job and ending as station agent at Bendersville, ended Friday for T. F. Wright, of Aspers.

Having passed his seventieth birthday anniversary last Sunday, Mr. Wright was retired on age by the Reading company, and will receive a pension as long as he lives.

The retired railroader will be succeeded as agent at Bendersville by Roy R. Starnier, of Bendersville, who has been telegraph operator and clerk at the Bendersville station for the past 14 years.

Native of York County
A native of York county, Mr. Wright spent the greater part of his life in Adams county, his father having built the home of the late Amos Griest, Quaker Valley.

Mr. Wright left home in 1887 and went to Elmira, New York, where he took a business course. When the Reading company built its spur from Bowmansdale to the Susquehanna river in 1890 and 1891, Mr. Wright was a timekeeper on the job which, in those days, was all pick and shovel work.

Becoming interested in railroad work through his position as timekeeper for the contractor who laid the line of track from Bowmansdale to the Susquehanna river, Mr. Wright later became a student telegrapher at the Rossmoyne station of the Reading.

Recalls Busy Days
After completing his practical course in telegraphy, he became a relief operator for several years, and finally was placed in charge of the station at Bowmansdale where he remained for eight years. Afterward, he was transferred to Carlisle where he worked as telegraph operator and ticket clerk for four years, before being assigned to the Bendersville station where he remained for 28 years and seven months.

Mr. Wright today recalled that station agents and telegraphers were kept busy when the old G. and H. railroad was flourishing at its height. Three passenger trains were operated daily both ways between Gettysburg and Carlisle Junction and two trains ran each way on Sunday, Mr. Wright said, besides the numerous freights using the division.

In good health and active, Mr. Wright said he has made no plans for the immediate future.

Florist Sends Epley Flowers

The eighth basket of flowers to be presented to C. W. Epley in connection with his current 1935 automobile show was delivered Friday evening at the York street display rooms. The basket was presented to Mr. Epley by Cremer, the florist, of Hanover, and with it was a congratulatory card from the Hanover florist.

President Paul G. Hoffman, of the Studebaker corporation, who was unable to attend the opening of the show a week ago, wrote Mr. Epley as follows:

"I regret that I was unable to attend the opening of your automobile show, but pressure of business prevented my leaving South Bend.

"Judging from the reports I have received from company officials who represented me at your opening, you are to be congratulated on such a splendid exposition and if I have an opportunity I shall be happy to visit your show before it closes. I congratulate you and I wish you success."

Negro Arrested On Theft Charge

Herbert Miller, 24, colored, South Washington street, was arrested Friday for the theft of a suede jacket from James Hoffman, 25 Washington street, February 25. Hoffman saw another man wearing the jacket, valued at $4.50, and it was traced back to Miller, according to Officer C. M. Spence, who made the arrest. Miller signed a plea of guilty before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, and in default of bail was committed to the Adams county jail.

Principals in Boston's Strange Suicide Pact

"We loved each other—we came here to end it all—but I got afraid," sobbed Bea Leonora Bryan (right), 29-year-old manicurist, after she had lost her nerve in a suicide pact in which Harry B. Van Allen, New York bond broker, leaped 12 stories to his death from the window of a Boston hotel. Van Allen's wife, shown left with William C. Gehring, her attorney and life-long friend of the broker, flew to Boston immediately but refused to confront the manicurist. (Associated Press Photos)

The Rev. Dr. R. W. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. W. G. Group, of East Berlin, and the Rev. J. Harold Little, pastor of the Heidelsburg Lutheran church. Burial in adjoining cemetery. Friends may call at the Bosserman home Sunday evening between 7 and 9 o'clock.

Irish Repay Local Man on Bond of 1920

While large nations are defaulting on their war debts to this country the Irish Free State has made good on its external loans and Michael J. Flynn, Baltimore street, today can vouch for this fact.

In 1920 Mr. Flynn, together with a number of other Philadelphians, purchased a $25 Irish bond. The bonds were purchased, Mr. Flynn said, more on a dare by other friends and "considered a contribution to the Irish people by most of us who purchased the bonds. We had no idea of ever collecting."

This morning Mr. Flynn received a check for $31.25 from the Irish government. The check was drawn on the National City Bank of New York, and was signed by the envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the Irish Free State, the consul general of the Irish Free State and the officer-in-charge of the repayment office.

Accompanying the check was a letter from Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish Free State, as president of the executive council.

The letter follows:
Roinn an Uachtairin
Department of the President
Baile Atha Cliath
Dublin

"On behalf of the Irish people I take this opportunity to thank the American citizens who subscribed to the External Loans of the Irish Republic. They trusted and helped us in our time of need. It is a privilege to return the money that they lent us. The debt of gratitude we owe them is, however, one that we can never fully repay."

2 More Cases of Scarlet Fever

Two additional cases of scarlet fever have been quarantined by Health Officer Erie Deatrlick. William Ogden, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ogden, Liberty street, and Martha Wilson, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Wilson, Fourth street, have contracted the disease. Both are students at the High street school.

WED HERE TODAY

Miss Mary V. Pittenger, 24, of Chambersburg, and Arthur L. Winkert, 34, Chambersburg R. D., were married by the Rev. Spencer W. August, pastor of St. James' Lutheran church here this morning.

ADMITS FOUR THEFT COUNTS

Clarence W. Deardorff, 24, Tells Shealer He Stole Chickens.

After a fourth charge of chicken-stealing was laid against him, Clarence W. Deardorff, 24, Stevens street, signed pleas of guilty to all four charges when Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer interviewed him at the Adams county jail, Friday evening.

The fourth information against Deardorff was laid by Officer George B. Aughinbaugh in connection with the theft of five chickens from the home of Mrs. George Plintz, East Middle street, March 12. Two of the five chickens were later recovered. Deardorff also pleaded guilty to the theft of chickens from the homes of J. E. Snyder, South street; Luther McDonnell, West Middle street, and Mrs. Bryant Kint, York street.

Deardorff is accused of stealing at least 26 chickens in Gettysburg during the winter months. Of that number only eight were recovered. Some of the others were sold by Deardorff, Officer Aughinbaugh said.

COLLEGE GRAD IN STATE POST

Forrest Mercer Is Appointed Attorney for State Highway Department.

Forrest Mercer, of Mechanicsburg, a Harrisburg attorney at law and graduate of Gettysburg college, class of 1908, was appointed attorney for the Pennsylvania state highway department by Attorney General Charles J. Margliotti, Friday. He succeeds John L. Shelley, Esq., of Mechanicsburg.

Attorney Mercer was the democratic candidate for congress in the nineteenth district last year. After graduating from college here, Mr. Mercer taught school for three years, and then entered the Harvard law school, from which he was graduated in 1914. Since that time he has been practicing law in Mechanicsburg and Harrisburg.

During the World war, Mr. Mercer was a lieutenant in the United States army.

Mr. Mercer, who is 47 years old, will receive a salary of $5,000 a year as attorney for the highway department.

C. E. Wolfe Is Moose Dictator

C. Eugene Wolfe was elected dictator of Gettysburg lodge, 1526, Loyal Order of Moose, at the regular April meeting, Friday evening. He succeeds Charles Evans.

Other officers chosen at the meeting include Francis Yingling, vice dictator; L. L. Collins, prelate; George Burgher, treasurer; H. C. Albright and Lloyd Reed, trustees; Charles Evans, representative to the supreme lodge, and Irvin Plattenburg, alternate.

The newly-elected officers will be installed by Mr. Plattenburg, a past dictator, Friday evening, April 19.

EXPECT HEAVY MOTOR TRAVEL THROUGH STATE

Various Agencies Predict $200,000,000 Will Be Spent By Visitors.

GIVE REASONS FOR PREDICTION

Motor travel through Pennsylvania this spring and summer will be heavier than any year since 1929, a survey by the Pennsylvania Motor federation, AAA, reveals. The state motoring body estimates that $200,000,000 will be spent by tourists in Pennsylvania during 1935.

Many indications point to a further gain in the travel industry, which showed phenomenal recovery during the past year, reaching the highest level since the start of the depression, the federation said.

Favorable Indications
Among the favorable signs cited are:

That winter travel to the south, always a barometer for the following spring and summer, was heavier this year than at any time since the peak of the Florida boom in 1925.

That inquiries to motor clubs regarding vacation trips are more numerous than in the same period of any year since the depression.

That increased car sales and production will result in additional travel this year.

That hotel rates and general travel costs are still moderate.

That summer resorts are anticipating record-breaking business this year.

Through the state department of highways, motor clubs and other agencies an extensive "See Pennsylvania" campaign will be conducted this year. "Pennsylvania has much to offer the vacationist," said Stewart H. Moyer, manager of the local motor club, "and it is planned to bring its many attractions before the motorist. This state is readily accessible to the tourist from every section of the United States and Canada, and its thousands of miles of new rural roads have opened territories that previously were almost inaccessible."

"Plans are now being mapped out to call attention of Pennsylvanians, as well as people from other states, to the many attractions of the Keystone state, and this is expected to be reflected in increased motor travel."

EGGS JUMP TWO CENTS A DOZEN ON LOCAL CURB

Eggs went up two cents a dozen since last Saturday at Gettysburg's curb market today, being quoted at 22 cents a dozen.

Butter continued at 30 cents a pound.

Dressed chickens were unchanged, ranging from 55 cents to $1.50 each. Apples remained at 75 cents to $1.50 a bushel.

Strawberry plants sold at 60 cents a hundred.

Dandelion, oyster root, spinach, parsnips and winter onions were plentiful, with no change in price.

Berlin Educator Will Speak Here

MEDALLION IS GIVEN ON EVE OF BIRTHDAY

Local Man Will Observe His 96th Anniversary Monday; Award Prizes

OLDEST OF EIGHT VETS IN LEGION

On the eve of the observance of his ninety-sixth birthday anniversary, Major Calvin Gilbert, oldest native-born resident of Gettysburg, has been presented with the gold star of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

This is the highest decoration awarded by the Loyal Legion and the Springs avenue veteran was described as "the happiest man alive" when he received the small solid gold star which he will wear with his insignia of the Loyal Legion.

Major Gilbert is the oldest of eight surviving veterans of the Loyal Legion of Pennsylvania. Colonel William Innes Forbes, of Philadelphia, is commander of the organization in Pennsylvania.

Major Gilbert has been confined to the house the greater part of the winter, but expects to be about as soon as the weather improves. No formal observance of his birthday anniversary is planned, his daughter, Miss Kate Gilbert, said today.

Born in Gettysburg
Born in Gettysburg, April 8, 1839, Major Gilbert was apprenticed at the age of 14 to learn the trade of carriage-making, which he followed until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted in Company F, 87th Pennsylvania volunteer infantry.

At that time he was a member of the Independent Blues, a local military organization, organized several years before the Civil war. He is now the sole survivor of the Blues and Company F.

Major Gilbert served as a private with the 87th infantry for sixteen months, and after being honorably discharged, he immediately re-enlisted in the commissary department at Washington, D. C., and received from President Lincoln the appointment and commission as a captain.

After a year's service at Washington and Annapolis, Major Gilbert was with General Abercrombie at Belle Plains Landing, Virginia, and participated in the battles of Cold Harbor, the Wilderness and Spotsylvania.

Saw Town Burned
He was in charge of the supply depot at Fredericksburg when the Union army was withdrawn from that place, and returned to Washington, where he was stationed at Fort Stevens when the national capital was attacked.

Later, Major Gilbert was ordered to Harrisburg for commissary duty in the Cumberland Valley and was in charge of the supply depot at Chambersburg when that town was burned by the Confederates. He was the last officer to leave the stricken town and one of the first to return after the conflagration. He remained there until the close of the war and was discharged from service November 30, 1865, having served four and a half years.

President Johnson breveted Mr. Gilbert a major for "faithful and meritorious service."

He is among the oldest Masons in Pennsylvania, having joined that order in 1864 while in service.

Major Gilbert cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, and claims to have voted at every presidential election since.

MESSANGER WITH $6,000

IS ABDUCTED FROM BANK
Kansas City, April 6 (AP)—A robber trio with a foreign accent kidnapped a bank messenger Friday, seized $6,000 in currency and released him fifteen miles away after threatening to "blow your head off if you look around."

"And I didn't look, believe me," said Chester Conrad, 35, who had left his Missouri bank and trust company office to cash a check in the same building.

The hold-up was executed so quietly that Sheriff Thomas Bash said Friday night he virtually was without descriptions or clues.

After cashing the check Conrad was walking the few steps to his bank when a pistol was pushed against his back. A muffled voice ordered "Get a-going there."

PREACHER BLINDFOLDED

SO JURY CAN SEE MOVIE
Birmingham, Ala., April 6 (AP)—A blindfold and a Bible combined Friday to allow members of a Jefferson county grand jury to see a motion picture, and to keep clear the conscience of one of its members, the Rev. Arthur O. Garner, who does not "believe in such entertainment."

Eleven jurors wanted to see the movie, but not the Rev. Mr. Garner. The law provides jurymen must remain together.

After arguments pro and con a solution presented itself. The Rev. Mr. Garner attended the movie, but with his back to the screen and a blindfold over his eyes.

In return for this compromise with his conscience, he gave a Bible reading and a 30-minute sermon to the other jurors.

ENTERS GUILTY PLEA

Philip Crawford, of Gettysburg, charged with breaking and entering a Reading company passenger coach in the local yards recently, signed a plea of guilty before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, Friday evening.

YOUTHS LOOT MILROY BANK

Get $3,000 in Small Bills But Overlook $5,000 in Currency and $3,000 Silver.

Milroy, April 6 (AP)—Four youths escaped into the rugged mountain regions Friday after robbing the Milroy Banking company of $3000 in small bills.

They overlooked $5000 in currency and about $3000 in silver in the vault.

Two men, wearing dark glasses, entered the bank. A "lookout" stood outside and a fourth sat at the wheel of a stolen automobile. "We want you to verify this," said one of the men as he walked to the window of Cashier George Meek.

Then he changed his tone, said: "Hands up."

Forced to Lie on Floor
The pair then forced Meek to lie on the floor, face down and tied his arms behind his back with laces from his shoes.

They took the vault key from his pocket, seized their loot and then took him to the directors' room. He was freed by passersby who heard his cries.

Meek told police he saw a car pull up to the curb, and suspecting a robbery, locked the vault and noted the license number. A check showed the machine was stolen from Regina Hartshek, of Wilkinsburg.

State police traced the robber car to Tusseyville, in Centre county, where they lost the trail.

The proprietress of a roadhouse at the edge of Milroy said men who answered the description of the robbers came to her place last midnight and drank beer until 2 a. m.

Miss Beegle Gives Week's Schedule

Norman, Okla., April 6 (AP)—Out of a snarl of war department red tape, the University of Oklahoma Friday picked a famous football coach, Captain Lawrence (Bill) Jones, and "fraternity row" buzzed in gleeful anticipation of halcyon days of victory.

The long-awaited formal announcement of the change came from the war department in Washington. In Oklahoma City, the university board of regents voted unanimously for the employment of Jones, who commented in Baton Rouge, "I am glad of the opportunity offered by the transfer."

Campus comment was virtually unanimously favorable. "We won't look like the House of David football team now," chorled a member of the Ruf-Neks, pep squad whose members during the football seasons shave only when the Sooners win.

Captain Jones will be transferred at once from Louisiana State, where he tired of the dictatorial attacks of Senator Huey Long.

Plan Rural Scout Tribe in County

A rural scouting program will be started in Adams county in the near future, it was announced from the office of the York-Adams Area Council at York.

Charles L. Lott, a former lone scout leader has been placed in charge of this program. It was also announced that special emphasis will be placed on the lone scouting phase of the program. Plans call for the organization of a large county-wide tribe composed of several home patrols. This will give the isolated farm boy a chance to participate in the scout movement and receive the same service as do troop scouts.

CARDINAL LOCATELLI DIES AT AGE OF 97

Rome, April 5 (AP)—Achille Cardinal Locatelli, first of the sacred college to be created by Pope Pius XI, died Friday night of pneumonia. He was 97 years old.

The disease worked swiftly with the aged churchman. Thursday he attended the public consistory. He was stricken immediately afterward.

Cardinal Locatelli passed almost forty years in the diplomatic service of the Vatican and has represented the Pope in the nine continents.

He was born in Seregno, in the Milan Diocese.

In the first consistory of Pope Pius, XI, Locatelli was elevated to the cardinalate. The Pope and Locatelli both were natives of Lombardy and were friends when the pontiff was Mgr. Achille Ratti.

The death of the cardinal leaves the sacred college with but fifty members, an extraordinary low number, compared with the maximum of seventy. Foreign cardinals now are in the majority.

"Biff" Jones to Coach Oklahoma

Norman, Okla., April 6 (AP)—Out of a snarl of war department red tape, the University of Oklahoma Friday picked a famous football coach, Captain Lawrence (Bill) Jones, and "fraternity row" buzzed in gleeful anticipation of halcyon days of victory.

The long-awaited formal announcement of the change came from the war department in Washington. In Oklahoma City, the university board of regents voted unanimously for the employment of Jones, who commented in Baton Rouge, "I am glad of the opportunity offered by the transfer."

Campus comment was virtually unanimously favorable. "We won't look like the House of David football team now," chorled a member of the Ruf-Neks, pep squad whose members during the football seasons shave only when the Sooners win.

Captain Jones will be transferred at once from Louisiana State, where he tired of the dictatorial attacks of Senator Huey Long.

"GANG BUSTER" STARTS WAR ON CHICAGO CRIME

Chicago, April 6 (AP)—War on the underworld was proclaimed in earnest Friday.

Chief Supervising Captain Daniel Gilbert, veteran crime fighter with an established reputation as a "gang buster," assumed his duties as de facto head of the police department by attacking the richest source of illegal revenue—gambling.

He ordered the lid clamped on the gaming industry and warned it must be riveted down. His announcement spread fear of raids among the city's handbook operators but none was immediately closed.

CREW OF WRECKED SHIP ARRIVES IN BOSTON

Boston, April 6 (AP)—Nine sailors of the Jacksonville, Florida, schooner Kenton landed in Boston Friday and told how they narrowly escaped death in a shipwreck off the west African coast. No lives were lost.

Capt. J. Ancil Boyette, 28, of Jacksonville, Florida, former track star at University of Florida, and captain of the team in 1932, and eight members of his crew returned here.

Captain Boyette, who took his brother Jack from Lee high school in Jacksonville for the trip, said the adventures had not dimmed his interest in shipping.

Barricaded Schoolm'am Defies Sheriff When Pay Is Denied

Globe, Ariz., April 6 (AP)—A defiant school teacher, Mrs. L. Madge Woodley, 45, who was said to have pulled her would-be successor's hair, clung to her barricaded little schoolhouse Friday night, but was threatened with possible arrest today.

Saying she would not "come out until I collect my pay," Mrs. Woodley cooked her evening meal in the remote Green Valley district school and prepared to sleep in a bed she moved there.

A deputy sheriff planned to serve court writ tomorrow and to arrest her if she refused to vacate.

Sam Haught, chairman of the school trustees, said that Mrs. Woodley's term at the "accommodation school" expired February 1, but that when Miss Opal Lee sought to take charge in the reorganized district Mrs. Woodley pulled her

KILLER CAUGHT WITHOUT FIGHT

Texas Sheriff Captures Raymond Hamilton, Desperado; Fires No Shot.

Dallas, Texas, April 6 (AP)—Swashbuckling Raymond Hamilton, 22-year-old Texas desperado, who had boasted he never would be recaptured alive, was arrested Friday night in Fort Worth without the firing of a shot.

Sheriff Smoot Schmid, of Dallas county, four of his deputies and a Fort Worth detective surrounded him in the railroad yards just as darkness fell. Chief Deputy E. B. Becker pushed the muzzle of a gun into Hamilton's ribs. The bank robber gave up without an effort to resist, the officers said as they hurried him into the county jail here after a swift trip from the city thirty miles west of Dallas.

The sheriff learned of Hamilton's whereabouts, through a tip picked up here.

Find Note On His Pal

Two city detectives, the sheriff said, saw a known associate of Hamilton riding around town in a taxicab and picked him up. A note from Hamilton was reported found on him. The man, Schaud said, finally divulged the whereabouts of the bandit.

The sheriff called Fort Worth officers by telephone, and Carl Harman, deputy sheriff, and Detective Chester Reagan aided him and his four deputies in the capture.

Bundled into the county jail, heavily manacled and chained to two officers, Hamilton put on a show of bravado. He shook hands with several acquaintances in the crowd of officers, newspapermen and curious, and assumed an air of nonchalance.

Laughs At His Own Remarks

The chameleon-like death house fugitive, ruthless when first at the "draw," but contrastingly meek when outwitted, ended a crazy fight of months which more than once saw him wriggle free from sinistral in the clutches of pursuers.

He was dressed in overalls, none too clean, with a brown vest over them, and a brown hat.

He took off the hat and leaned back against the wall of the jail receiving room. He laughed frequently at his own remarks.

"How did you get out of Mississippi?" he was asked.

"Just as fast as possible," was the answer.

$4,880,000,000 RELIEF MEASURE FINALLY PASSED

Congress Approves Long Disputed Bill, Largest in Nation's History.

DESIGNED TO EMPLOY IDLE

Washington, April 6 (AP)—The biggest peace time appropriation in history, $4,880,000,000 was voted President Roosevelt Friday to carry out already well-defined plans designed to end the "dole" and put men to work.

Two and a half months of often bitter struggle by congress over the bill ended with a final approval by the senate as darkness settled upon the capitol. Just a little earlier, the house had given its endorsement amid shouts by republicans that congress was putting into the president's hands an implement to assure his re-election in 1936.

The votes ended a long row over the amount of money that should be spent for "direct" labor of some $900,000,000 to be allotted for state projects. Senate conferees at first said a third should be spent that way. Administration forces urged no restriction. A conference committee of senators and representatives agreed upon 25 per cent., with the president given leeway in deciding between "direct" and "indirect" payments.

Hopkins, Tugwell, Ickes. A swift fight by airplane was planned to take the golden-sealed, ribbon-decked bill to the president, now fishing in Southern waters, for signature. Early announcement from him of detailed plans for expending the fund was expected.

Because the house adjourned before the senate could message over its action on the relief measure, it will not be signed by Speaker Byrns until shortly after noon tomorrow when the house meets. Then it is to be taken to Vice President Garner for his signature, which will send it to the White House.

A board will be set up to handle the fund under the direction of the president. Likely members of the board are Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture, Secretary Ickes and Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples of the treasury procurement office.

The final vote by the senate on the measure was 66 to 13. In the house the conference report had been approved by 317 to 70.

The measure is designed to put 3,500,000 employables now on relief rolls to work on eight major types of projects. It gives President Roosevelt almost limitless power for two years, however, in using the fund.

Seven Months of Tapering

The measure transfers $880,000,000 of unexpended funds from existing agencies to the hard pressed relief administration to be used in tapering off the "dole" by next November.

The $4,000,000,000 fund is to be spent for federal and non-federal public works, highways, housing, rural electrification, farm improvement, education, "white collar" work and numerous other projects.

The final flurry of debate in the senate, brought an objection from Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, to the removal from the bill of his plan to issue silver certificates. He said there had been little talk of where the money was coming from.

Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, replied warmly that he had told where the money would come from and added:

"And when it comes there will be the biggest howl ever heard. It is coming from the taxpayers."

PINCHOT, BACK IN U. S., BRUSHES UP ON POLITICS

San Francisco, April 6 (AP)—Gifford Pinchot, former governor of Pennsylvania, arrived here Friday with Mrs. Pinchot after a vacation in the South Seas and said he had found considerable enjoyment in not having read anything about politics or world events for more than a month.

Mr. Pinchot hadn't heard anything about Herbert Hoover's recent caustic criticism of the administration, but when the former president's statement was outlined to him he merely smiled. But he talked about his vacation.

"Mrs. Pinchot and I made a cruise in a native copra boat," he said with a smile.

ARCHDUKE OTTO'S COUSIN IS INDICTED AS SWINDLER

Paris, April 6 (AP)—Archduke Wilhelm, of Hapsburg, a cousin of Archduke Otto, pretender to the abolished throne of Austria, was indicted Friday on a charge of swindling.

The archduke was accused of aiding a friend, Paulette Couyba, a former singer, who was jailed several months ago on a charge of having taken money from hotels in return for a promise of publicity, said publicity never having been delivered.

SYNOPSIS: James and Jane Stinson are settled in a house chosen by Jane, paid for by her father, and furnished by the latter and the wedding guests. James finds also that he is supposed to neglect his own Aunt Sarah, who lives in the old house he was born in, and always be on call at the "Northrup". Jane's parents bore James, and James bore the Northrup. Besides, Jane has offended James otherwise—she has tied his puppy in the sun, and would have killed him but for her twin brothers.

Chapter 30 MONGREL

James was able about this time to pay back the twins for their timely care of Peter.

One Sunday at the dinner table he noticed that the twins' eyes were red and that they ate scarcely anything, instead of stuffing themselves until their skins popped, as was their habit.

Mr. Northrup, too, was not his chatty self, and Mrs. Northrup seemed more tight lipped and iron clad than usual. As soon as they had a mouthful or two of lemon pie the twins excused themselves and disappeared. Afterward James found out from the cook that they were in the stable and followed them there.

The twins were in the carriage room caressing a skin and bones mongrel dog which lay panting on a pile of sacking.

They explained that they had found the mongrel following a wagon driven by a drunken farm hand. He had flicked her with his whip and gone off on a gallop.

"They won't let us keep her," Norris got out. He was fighting back sobs. "They say we have to give her to the dog catcher tomorrow."

"And she's a mother dog, about to have puppies," Nate explained unnecessarily. "The dog catcher will kill her and drown the puppies." He sniffed. "She loves us. She really does love us. See how she licks my hand." Nate broke down and cried. James was close to crying himself.

"Well, we can't have that," he said quickly. "I'll tell you what we'll do. Terry, my old cocker spaniel, died last week of old age, and Jett won't live much longer. Peter needs someone young to play with. Suppose we take her out to my old home and turn her over to Aunt Sarah and Aunt Lou. They're fond of dogs and they'll be crazy about the puppies. You can go to see them every afternoon."

Four round tear-streaked blue china eyes regarded him worshipfully. The poor suffering brute on the floor thumped her tail hopelessly. But . . . but suppose your aunt wouldn't like us hanging around so much," Nate protested gruffly.

"Oh, Aunt Sarah and Aunt Lou are used to boys. They're pretty lonesome out there alone. They'll be tickled to death to have you."

"I'll tell you what. Puppies eat an awful lot after they get bigger. We'll take them bones and buy them meat. We'd like to. Honestly."

"That's a fine idea. I don't suppose there will be many bones with only two women in the house." "But how will we get her out there?" Norris asked. "She can't walk." The poor mother was evidently very close to her hour. "I'll hire a carriage," James said briskly. And did. Sally, as she was afterwards named, was tenderly conveyed on a pillow (off Nate's bed) to her new home in the empty Mansion barn. The next morning Sally was the vaingloriously proud mother of three male puppies. The twins named them James the first, James the second and James the third, explaining to the somewhat overwhelmed recipient of this flattering tribute they were to be called, James, Jimmy and Jim.

Though it was never evident to outsiders, James now had two warm friends in the enemy's camp. And Aunt Sarah's and Aunt Lou's monotonous lives had a new brightness. They said the Northrup twins were the two best behaved boys they had ever met.

James learned a great many valuable things that first year of his marriage. He learned not to smoke all over the house but only in his "den."

He learned that his habit of waking up each morning, cheerful and sportive as a young puppy, and attempting to romp with his wife while she was sleepy and cross was a little less reprehensible than wife beating. (Jane in fact stated she would prefer a beating.)

He learned that wiping up the dark stained wooden bathroom floor after his bath with Jane's best monogrammed towels was a wicked and perfidious rather than a meritorious act.

He learned that Jane believed that kissing should be kept for special occasions, such as partings or greetings, or good nights or good mornings or moments of high emotion, but thought it silly and not quite "nice" now that her first ardor had been satisfied to be kissed frequently for no reason at all. James was perhaps almost overly demonstrative and was certain to take offense and get on his dignity when accused of "silliness."

The honeymoon was soon over for Jane. Nevertheless Jane was sensible enough to recognize the boyish affection in most of James' demonstrativeness and made a real, if always apparent, effort to appear more affectionate than she was.

During all that first year and well into the second year of her marriage Jane continued to be ridden with servant troubles. But it speaks much for young Mrs. Stinson's efficiency that her house continued to be run as by clock work, that her closets and attics and cellar would bear inspection at any hour of the day, that her hired girl (New Concord did not rise to the dignity of maids until some years later) was never known to answer the front door bell in a frowsy dress or apron.

New Concord rendered Jane due credit. But it was also told with considerable relish by Jane's contemporaries—jealous no doubt of her big house, her constant entertaining—that it was common gossip in the humbler quarters of the town, as well as in the agencies in Saint Joseph and Kansas City, that "she" was hard to work for and "he" nice and friendly but kinda glum.

But Jane's efficiency was at last rewarded when she had been married about seventeen months she found Anna, the perfect servant, and her domestic difficulties were solved.

Anna was a large, raw-boned, washed-out blonde in her late twenties, who had labored in the fields of Sweden, and tossed off the work of the Stinson household as casually as a farmer tosses aloft a pitchfork of hay. Anna was not beautiful to look upon, having a large birthmark that covered her left cheek, and about which she was excessively sensitive. She suffered besides from a disappointment in love and hated bitterly not only the author of her woes, but all the rest of his treacherous sex.

"We've got a new girl," James told his Aunt Sarah during one of their cosy Sunday afternoons before the fire in the library.

Miss Sarah was only too delighted to have James to herself one afternoon a week. Miss Sarah still kept up the fiction, even with Aunt Lou, that she was pleased and happy at her nephew's marriage. But Miss Sarah petitioned her Maker nightly to root out her growing dislike for James' wife. Now she said, "Poor James' wife seems to have had a hard time keeping a servant. But that is not unusual with young housekeepers."

"I have a premonition that this one is going to stick to us for life," James answered lazily, and related Anna's history.

"Poor thing. You'll have to be extra kind to her."

"Not me. I've tried to make friends and been firmly put in my place. Anna has trusted one man but never another. She has just about as much affection for me as she'd have for a poisonous snake."

"That can't be very pleasant." "Pleasant? Pleasant is the last word you would ever apply to Anna. Anna has made up her mind to be a lovelorn damsel the rest of her life."

"Have you said anything . . . anything to Jane about moving back to the Mansion?" Miss Sarah asked timidly. "This big house is pretty expensive to heat in the winter. I thought that if Aunt Lou and I moved to the cottage, perhaps I could get along on less and you could have part of the income from what's left from your grandfather's estate."

"What Grandfather left is yours," James answered shortly. "No. I haven't said anything to Jane. Her house is still a new toy. I'm waiting until she gets tired of it." "I suppose that is wise," Miss Sarah sighed. And talked briskly of something else. They usually talked briskly of something else when Jane's name had been mentioned. (Copyright, 1935, Mabel H. Farnham)

James realizes, Monday, that he is "on the spot."

Though Ill, Bankhead May Visit House to Save Post as Leader

Washington, April 6 (AP).—The likelihood arose Friday that Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, despite his ill health, would come to the House floor in person, if necessary, to stave off a move to replace him as democratic leader.

A secret effort to replace the Alabamian because of his continued illness has been undertaken by a small group of House democrats.

Coupled with it is a movement to replace Representative Taylor, of Colorado, as acting floor leader. Some of them argued that Taylor had not voted with the administration on all matters and that they desired a leader who would do that.

About the most that the dissatisfied members hoped from their efforts, however, was a caucus at which either Representative O'Connor, of New York, or Arnold, of Illinois, would be named to replace Taylor. Friends of Bankhead and Taylor did not believe such a caucus would be held.

At the same time, it was disclosed that Bankhead's friends were keeping a close watch on the situation and that he was prepared to come to the floor any time it became necessary to do so to block a move to oust him. He is recovering rapidly from his illness, but his physician has advised him to build up his strength before taking over the strenuous duties of the leadership.

The situation presented a delicate problem to Speaker Byrns and his lieutenants, who desire to avoid an open conflict at this time.

For some time a quiet move has been afoot among some northern democrats to build up sentiment for a showdown on whether the leadership post shall be declared vacant. Bankhead has not appeared on the floor since congress convened.

Despite secret meetings, dinners and private parties where friends of O'Connor have boosted him for the post, the Bankhead contingent considers itself sufficiently entrenched to withstand any effort to force a showdown.

SPRING AND CITY STREETS

When the leaf comes back to the bough
And the blue comes back to the sky;
When the furrow turns to the plow,
A longing comes into my eye—
A longing to up and away
From the cold gray walls of the street
And the ledger accounts of the day
Where the grass is soft to the feet.
Nor time nor the urging of care,
Nor the mustiness of tasks to be done
Can crush the desire to be where
The earth bares her breast to the sun;
Where nothing of brick and cement
Has sealed in a ribbon-like tomb
The countless delights that were meant
To brighten man's pathway with bloom.

I walk through the city and think,
With the sun shining warm overhead,
Of the petals of purple and pink
Which under the pavements lie dead.
Man has stifled the warm earth with stone
And has shut out the sun and the rain,
And never those roadways will own
The buttercups' glory again.

When the leaf comes back to the bough
And the spring of the year is at hand,
I've a yearning to wander somehow
To the feel and the charm of the land;
To see daisies reach up to the sky
As if singing an anthem of joy
Which the streets of the city deny
And the makers of cities destroy.

His that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful dispu-tations.

For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

Who are thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth;
yes, he shall be hidden up: for
God is able to make him stand.

One man esteemeth one day
above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and the living.

But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

Romans 14:1-12.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams
THE LEARNED MAN

IT IS a fallacy that the learned man is the one who has crowded his brain with material gained from books. The learned man is he who has experienced life, drawn from its springs the refreshing waters of knowledge of the human heart.

There are those who may be termed merely walking books. The learned man is a walking entity of understanding. He is of a man complete—Carlyle's own "able man."

His is a mind trained to discern, to know light from darkness, and to appraise all men according to their worth. The learned man is one of catholic tastes. He is devoted to no school of thought. He is friend to all. He disdains popularity. He sees in the soul of man great distinction. He bows to beauty and cherishes every creation in nature.

Real learning can never consist of a memorized dictionary, or a bundle of facts, but of clear vision and truthful expression. All truths, all instances, and all revelations, are absorbed by the learned man, because he has a place for them. His spirit is expansive. His heart is as alert as his mind. He lives and grows great in himself, nourished by God-in-stincts.

The learned man is he who has learned to think. He is a book in himself—unpublished, though a thousand readers may know his pages if they will.

He who has mastered kindness, practiced gentleness to an art, known the bitterness of disappointment and loss, experienced pain as good medicine, and yet who looks upon life as a glorious adventure, surely merits the distinction of being learned.

What a treat to sit with such a human being, what a rare find for a friend!

No one, however, can coach us in this acquirement of learning. We must be self-schooled. No one else can tell us what is good for us. We know that better than anyone else. And we are the most highly learned when we have best solved life, and are reasonably satisfied with our solution.

FLYING TIME

News and Views in the Field of Aviation as Compiled by Manager of Gettysburg Airport.

By George D. "Peck" Forney

The performances of the new high speed transports is rather discouraging to private fliers who still have to cruise along at 125 to 150 miles per hour. Several times I have been passed by Douglasses and Boeings and find the sudden feeling of going backwards very unpleasant.

So private fliers are demanding faster small ships. One has recently been developed which should answer the needs of the "more-speed" enthusiasts. The all-metal, low-wing monoplane Crusader built in Denver, Colorado, is equipped with two Menasco motors developing 125 h. p. each. It shows a top speed of 233 m. p. h., cruises at 215, carries four passengers and is equipped to be as quiet as the air-liners.

Work has been started by the Pitcairn company on an autogyro which may also be used as a car. After landing, the rotor blades are folded prop disengaged, and the wheels are geared to the motor. The flier then drives it home and puts it in his garage. This is a development which has long been in the minds of designers with a view to more practical use of the air. The first ship will be completed sometime this summer.

Then even grandma can learn to fly and be as much at home in the air as in her favorite rocking chair. Incidentally there is a woman at the present time who is 64 years of age (a grandmother) who flies her own ship all over the country.

A great deal of thought is being given to time payment policies in purchasing airplanes. Several companies now offer this system of payment and it won't be long until all of them will be forced to follow suit.

The Taylor Cub, a small $1,500 airplane, may be purchased with a down payment of $485.

I recently had a talk with a member of the flying staff of the Socony Vacuum Oil company, who has been flying since 1913. He assured me that in five years, television will be used in airplanes making it possible to land on any airport without even seeing it.

Here is another morsel of food for thought. Already airplanes have been taken off, flown and landed by the use of radio control. In a few years it will be possible to send a ship, say to Europe, with a load of bombs, without any pilot. The pilot will stay at home and work the radio control as he watches the pro-

MISS LAWRENCE CHIDED FOR HER EXTRAVAGANCE

London, April 6 (AP)—Gertrude Lawrence, star of "Private Lives," cheerfully revealed details of her own private life to the bankruptcy court registrar Thursday.

Young Douglas Fairbanks' good friend, in the course of the public examination of her creditors' petition, revealed that she received gross of the ship by television.

Couple this with the development of rocket ships (which, by the way, are much more highly developed than most of us realize) and you are liable to throw up your hands and exclaim, "what is this world coming to?"

Wiley Post is being starred in a flying movie called "Air Fury." With Wiley in it, it should be more or less authoritative in regard to aeronautics.

TEXAS STORM
INJURES 200

Troops. Sent to Establish Martial Law, Patrol Devastated Area of 500 Acres.

Eagle Pass, Texas, April 6 (AP).—

The count of the injured in storm-stricken Quemado Valley passed the 200 mark Friday night as troops, sent to establish martial law, patrolled a devastated area of which 500 acres were under water. No fatalities were reported.

Fears were felt for some of the scores injured when tornadic winds destroyed more than 80 homes and large hailstones dealt damage to crops.

Red Cross workers searched the debris over the fertile area and congressmen of the section urged government agencies to speed supplies.

Rescue Work Hampered

Sheets of water left standing after a five-inch rain accompanying the storm Thursday night hampered rescue parties.

Rushed here as fast as they could be picked up and transportation arranged, the injured were treated by physicians in Eagle Pass hospitals.

A baby born at the height of the storm was exposed with the mother to the blinding deluge. Both were in a dangerous condition. A family of six, found pinned beneath timbers of a demolished store at Normandy, were treated for serious injuries.

Huge Barn Collapses

A huge barn on the Tebbe spinach farm, to which 110 Mexicans fled for refuge, collapsed. Many were injured, three seriously.

Eighteen miles north of here, at Quemado, scores of storm refugees huddled in an abode meeting hall.
The north wall collapsed under the driving winds, and the crowd surged to the other end of the hall, but the roof and walls crumbled and several were cut and bruised.

Portions of a main highway through the region were under water Friday night. Five hundred acres of fertile land also were inundated.

PLAN THREE-POWER PARLEY

Astonished by the rebuff they received from the Reich foreign minister on their protest to German rearmament, France and Italy were expected to join England in a three-power protest to Germany's abrogation of the Versailles treaty. Sir John Simon (left), British envoy, was expected to meet after his conversations with Reichsfuehrer Hitler with Pierre Laval (center), French foreign minister, and Premier Mussolini (right) of Italy. Pen Scratch That Meant War 18 Years Ago Today, Recalled

Washington, April 6 (AP)—Eighteen years ago today, while the late President Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Wilson were eating lunch, a slender clerk walked from the executive offices to the usher's room in the White House proper carrying the war resolution passed by congress.

Rudolph Forster, President Roosevelt's executive clerk, sitting at his desk in the White House offices recalled the scene. Forster has been a member of the White House staff for more than thirty-eight years. He rubbed his fingers slowly along the edge of the desk as he spoke.

Resolution Signed
"As well as I recall," Forster said, "the president signed the resolution between 1:15 and 1:20 p. m. Mr. Wilson did most of his work at the White House proper during the war, and came over to the offices infrequently."

"I took the resolution to the usher's room and Mr. Wilson was notified that I was waiting. He and Mrs. Wilson came out at once. I may be mistaken, but as I recall it only the president, Mrs. Wilson, the late Ike Hoover, who was head usher, and myself were in the room at the time."

Called Tumulty
"I do not believe Mr. Wilson made any particular comment. It was a serious occasion, but the matter was handled in a manner similar to the handling of all bills sent here for signature."

"As soon as the resolution was signed, the United States was at war. I called Mr. Tumulty (Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the president) from the usher's telephone, and Mr. Tumulty announced the signing to the press."

Forster indicated that there was considerable confusion at the executive offices. He smiled.

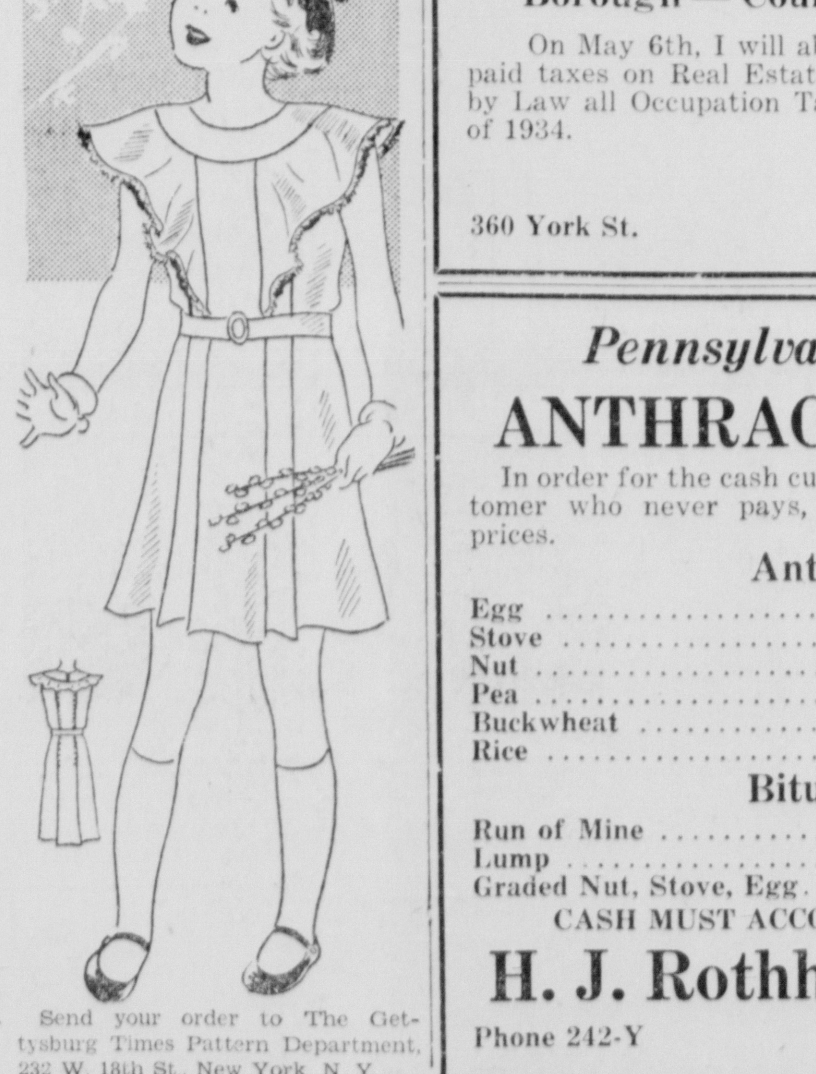

News Wig-Wagged
"I remember very well a young officer who had been sent over from the navy department—what was his name?"

"Anyhow, this young officer was present when Mr. Tumulty made the announcement. He dashed out

PATTERN 9338

There's an old theory that girls somewhere between the ages of six and fourteen are very difficult to dress. Sometimes they are lanky, sometimes they are plump, and quite often their proportioning isn't the most perfect just then. Well, try this pattern! We believe Marian Martin has accomplished marvels in its design—the graceful shoulder that narrows on down to the waist will make the least graceful girl appear too, too lovely. The nicely pleated skirt gives just the right amount of room and is unusually smart. It's a pattern that is excellent made in more sturdy materials for every day wear, or in sheer cottons for "dress up."

Pattern 9338 may be ordered only in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 12 requires 2 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Let the Marian Martin spring pattern book guide you to chic! Distinctive, wearable clothes are included in its forty beautifully illustrated pages. The new and the smart for tots, children, young and older women of heavier build. Every garment is one you can make with our easy-to-use Marian Martin patterns. Send for your copy now! Price of book fifteen cents. Book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Prep Opens Ball Season Wednesday

After two weeks of intensive drilling Coach Earl Zeigler's Gettysburg academy baseball nine is beginning to shape up nicely for its first game with the Hershey industrial school nine here next Wednesday.

Proposed Track Meet Not Feasible

Columbus (AP)—Alumni of Ohio State and Michigan who hoped to see their track athletes pitted against Southern California and California are doomed to disappointment—at least for this year.

The original plan, was for the Buckeyes and Wolverines to combine forces in a dual meet with a team representing the Pacific coast institutions the week-end before the national intercollegiate meet.

But L. W. St. John, athletic director of Ohio State, has returned from the west with the word that California's athletic department vetoed the proposition on the grounds that it would detract from interest in the big meet.

Swimmers Prove Star Students

Evanston, Ill. (AP)—When it comes to college athletes and the grades they make—or don't make—don't overlook Tom Robinson's swimmers.

Robinson, coach of swimming teams at Northwestern university for the past quarter century, says he has lost only three swimmers as a result of scholastic difficulties during the entire period.

Last semester, he says the records show a scholastic average of "B," 85 to 89, for the 15 members of the varsity squad, while the eight members of the water polo team averaged "A-minus," 90 to 94.

Grant, Crauford Kent, Howard Leeds, Ethel Griffiths, Elspeth Dudgeon, Mary Gordon, Aileen Pringle and George K. Arthur.

"Vanessa: Her Love Story," is the latest production of David O. Selznick, Metro-Goldwyn Mayer producer.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC
In a story of high romance, Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery come to the screen of the Majestic theatre Monday and Tuesday as costars for only the second time in their respective careers.

The story is "Vanessa: Her Love Story," from the pen of the novelist, Hugh Walpole. It is listed among the better photoplays of the new season.

Miss Hayes is the heroine, Vanessa, who, blindly in love with Montgomery, is persuaded to accept a more suitable marriage with Otto Kruger. She is not able to forget her first love and manages to spend a few happy hours with him after Kruger, insanely jealous, has ordered her from his home. How she and Montgomery work out the tangled skein of their lives provides the entertainment.

Kruger, as the madman, gives a good performance, assisted by May Robson, Lewis Stone, Henry Stephenson, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Donald Crisp, Jessie Ralph, Agnes Anderson, Lionel Belmore, Lawrence
